Lieut King, who is an charge of the works at Ordway, is laboring under some discausantings. For instance, list week he ordered tarce kegs of nails and some hardware to be sent out together with some tents which would come up from Fort Washington. The mails and hardware were given to an expression at the armory with matructions to go to the Seventh street wharf, get the tents and take them out to Ordway. He took the tents out, but shipped the nails and hardware to Fort Washington. The mails have been recovered but the hardware is gone. Not so with Lieut King's patience.

The Engineer Corps is getting very anxious to try the new range. Various meinters have been to see Major Harries and asked him to let them get to work the first. This will not be done, for the practice for the isoigade team will be the first shooting done at Ordway.
